Germany Embattled

*An American
Interpretation*

By OSWALD GARRISON VILLARD

This timely and interesting book is of special value, because it states Germany's case with extreme fairness before pointing out why it is that American traditions and institutions make it impossible for most Americans to take her side in the war. Some of the suggestive chapter headings are: "Germany at Bay," "The Two Germanys," "German Militarism and Democracy," "The Propaganda in America," "The Kaiser and the War."

The German Emperor

As Shown in His Public Utterances

By PROF. CHRISTIAN GAUSS, of Princeton University.

Without question the fairest, as it is one of the most illuminating, presentations of this much disputed character. In it may be traced with no little clearness the growth of the Emperor's opinions, the extent to which his ideas have really gone on the subject of German dominations, the course he has taken with regard to war and peace, etc.

A POWERFUL LOVE STORY

By the Young American Novelist

ANNE WARWICK

Author of "Victory Law," "The Unknown Woman," etc.

THE CHALK LINE

One of the most original and interesting stories which has appeared for many a long day. The reader's attention is gripped at once. There are no preliminaries, no tedious introduction. Hilary Comer is leaving her husband for the love of Louis Pembroke. She arrives at Pembroke's bungalow—the scene is laid at Shanghai—on the fourth page of the book. On her heels, not knowing she is actually there but guessing that she is coming, arrives a man who has figured in her life before her marriage, now intent on preventing the catastrophe. Following him appears the husband, who has also guessed, and an hour later these four people are shut up in the bungalow together, quarantined for cholera. The whole drama is played out during the days of quarantine with only these four actors, and there is not a dull page in the book. Undoubtedly an exceptional piece of work.

A TALE OF PASSION

By the Brilliant English Novelist

FORD MADOX HUEFFER

Author of "The Fifth Queen," etc.

THE GOOD SOLDIER

Five persons only are involved in what the author calls "a tale of passion." Four of them form themselves into a little coterie and for nine years are associated in the closest intimacy. These years are spent principally at Nauheim, and the party consists of an American (who tells the story), his American wife, and Captain Ashburnham (the good soldier), invalided home from India, with his wife, Leonora. Into this group enters "the girl"—a ward of the Captain—and presto, there follows the breaking-up of the little four-square coterie.

PATHS OF GLORY

BY

IRVIN S. COBB

- ¶ Here are all of Cobb's brilliant, human, fascinating, first-hand narratives of the Great War, which the whole nation has been discussing.
- ¶ "The paths of glory lead but to the grave," said the poet.
- ¶ Out with the German columns, Cobb has seen the glory of war; the impressiveness of a million marching men, the terrible efficiency of the big guns.
- ¶ But in the stilled trenches and villages he has seen the horror of war, and in this book there is not merely an unforgettable picture of the war as it is really going on, a picture made for Americans by a great American author, but a message of Peace.
- ¶ PATHS OF GLORY will have unpurchasable publicity from the fact that Cobb is now lecturing throughout the country to record-breaking audiences, followed everywhere by enthusiastic newspaper reports. And his adventures in Belgium and Germany were reported in every paper in the country. But both of these are of less importance than the fact that he has no equal as a graphic writer, keen observer, and a human being with a big heart that feels.

The Confessions of Frederick the Great

Treitschke's "Life of Frederick"

Edited, with a Topical and Historical Introduction

By DOUGLAS SLADEN

12mo. $1.25

The coupling of these two works in a single volume has a significance apart from the fact that they have bearing—the one as an intimate expression, the other as an able biographical sketch—upon one of the great figures of Prussian world history. Treitschke strongly influences the philosophy of war and the views regarding the destiny of the German nation embodied in Bernhardt's much discussed book, and Frederick's CONFES- SIONS, in the opinion of Mr. Sladen, is the soil from which the school of Treitschke and Bernhardt drew sustenance.

Alsace and Lorraine

By RUTH PUTNAM

Author of "Charles the Bold," "William the Silent," "A Mediaeval Princess," etc.

From the dim days of European struggle, Alsace and Lorraine have constituted one of the chief storm-centers of rival ambi- tions. Their history has, therefore, an intrinsic importance which attaches to few land groups of similar area. As the almost inevitable prize of a victorious France, they have a special claim upon the attention of those interested in the possible outcome of the present clash of nations.

Three Gentlemen from New Caledonia

By R. D. Hemingway and Henry de Halsalle

Dodging cannibal spears, three desperate criminals escape from the jungle-lined shores of New Caledonia and its penal colony. Twenty years before they were justly reputed in Paris and the world as "The Invisibles," supreme in daring—masters in crime. Now they return filled with hate and greedy for revenge. The scene shifts from Paris dives to placid English estates. The "Three Gentlemen," another gentleman, the over- eager M. Faverol of the Paris police, the girl, and all the rest make for the most exciting bit of fiction published in many a day.

On the Fighting Line

By CONSTANCE SMEDLEY

The spirit of the book breathes in this address with which the heroine turns in the hour of her trial to the portraits of the heroes with which she has surrounded herself: "Fighting Line, you're men, but as long as I am brave and go on fight- ing the best I can, the best I know, I claim you as comrades and I feel you saying, 'Buck up, go on,' just as you'd say to a man. There isn't an ounce of snivel or pity in your eyes. They say: 'It's a hard world and we've got to take our knocks alike, women and men, and never mind what anyone thinks of you. Courage is for everyone, women and men; truth is for everyone, women and men; honor is for everyone,—and it's the same sort of courage, truth, and honor too.'"

February Fiction and General Books

By the author of "The Lost Despatch"

C. O. D.

By Natalie Sumner Lincoln

The author of many detective successes has in "C. O. D." produced another remarkable mystery story woven around the members of the diplomatic circle at Washington. The circumstances surrounding the mysterious murder of a young man, just on the eve of his marriage, opens a way to an investigation that involves many prominent Washington families. Further complications arise when it is discovered that an important government despatch is missing and suspicion points to the dead man who is also suspected of having been a spy and blackmailer. Events follow rapidly in which the letters "C. O. D." figure prominently. Not until the last page of the last chapter does the reader discover the solution. The dénouement is as startling as it is unexpected.

FELIX TELLS IT

By Lucy Pratt

You are sure to love Felix. He is only ten but in these few short years of his life he has formulated a philosophy that is delightful in its originality. At a suggestion from his father that Macaulay was only eight when he wrote a history, Felix decides to write a book himself. He takes for his subject "The Nature of Fathers and Mothers" and very frankly he tells things "just as they are." That startling conclusions must follow is plainly inevitable, and fathers and mothers are sure to find much food for thought in this little volume that might have been written by their own little boy himself.

THE LITTLE MISSIONER

By
Nina
Wilcox
Putnam

A delightful romance of the out-of-doors. Brought up with the idea that she should devote her life to missionary work, Mary Watts, the little heroine, plans her life to that end. Suddenly there comes into the quiet of her little home the keen wide-a-woke personalities of some people of the world. Their influence is strong not only in Mary's life but in the life of the whole community, and gradually Mary realizes that the call of the heathen pales before the romance that develops in which she takes the principal part. The story sparkles with wit and humor and there is much sound homely philosophy throughout.

"RED-TAPE-ISM RUN MAD"—PARCEL POST INSURANCE.

THE experience of the booktrade correspondent, whose almost excusably sarcastic letter we reprint elsewhere in this issue of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY, in his endeavors to collect a small item of parcel post insurance would, as he says, "be humorous if it were not so exasperating." It is unnecessary here to repeat the history of his five months' endeavor, which he gives in some detail; but it does seem worth while to call the attention of those of the trade who may, like ourselves and our correspondent, have been ignorant of the exact procedure laid down to be followed in collecting parcel post insurance, and to call attention to the way and extent to which that procedure practically nullifies the insurance provisions of the law.

Our correspondent's delay and difficulty in securing copies of "Form 3812" appear to have been a bit of supererogatory nuisance, due to misunderstanding, carelessness or sheer stupidity on the part of the office to which he first made application for indemnity. Local post office employees are usually both courteous and genuinely desirous of being helpful and in no way responsible, of course, for the red-tape in which they are enmeshed. Unfortunately, however, "Form 3812" confronts every insurer whose parcel post package Uncle Sam has lost; and, since our correspondent does not describe it in his letter, it may be worth while, for the benefit of those booktrade readers who have not been privileged to see it, to analyze it briefly here, for as an example of red-tape-ism carried to the *n*th power, "Form 3812" is certainly a gem.

The first page (it consists of four legal-cap pages) lists thirteen questions to be filled out and acknowledged by the postmaster at the office of mailing. This page does not immediately concern us.

The second and third pages consist of twenty-eight questions to be answered and sworn to by the sender and his signature duly witnessed. Most of these questions were already covered once by the "Form 1510," referred to by our correspondent. These twenty-eight must also be subscribed and acknowledged by the "owner, if owner is neither sender or addressee," by the "person who prepared matter for mailing and wrapped it," and by the "person who handed article to postal employee." These signatures must be duly witnessed and sworn to before a person qualified to take acknowledgments. It is distinctly noted that "if the article was owned, prepared, and deposited in the mails by different persons, they should severally affix their signatures and acknowledge the foregoing statements." As this would be the case with practically any business concern, it is safe to say that from three to twelve signatures, counting accompanying acknowledgments, would thus be necessary for this one portion of the form!

On page four the addressee "gets his," he having duly to sign, acknowledge and have witnessed and countersigned his quota of questions. Following that, the postmaster at the office of the addressee has a statement to sign and acknowledge. Finally, if this unfortunate form has survived this gauntlet of signatures, and its extensive travels over the United States to secure them (for our correspondent tells us that in his case signatures would have to be sought in four different states), it goes to the Third Assistant Postmaster-General, who has his blank to approve the payment of the claim.

In due time, if, in the course of the months or perhaps years that have in the meanwhile elapsed, the original claimant has not died, it is probable, or at least possible, that he will receive his money. Of course, it is obvious that the collective time consumed in the concatenated and protracted transaction above outlined is worth several times the value of the original claim, and that this is as true of the Post Office Department as it is of the private individual concerned. In fact, it might even be said that the Post Office authorities foresaw that this would be the case, as the form distinctly specifies "No indemnity can be paid to cover or include the cost . . . of furnishing this declaration, whether or not indemnity is paid or recovery is made." In so far as this is the case, of course, the procedure, as was said before, nullifies the purpose of the insurance service the insurance provision was supposed to give.

It seems fairly obvious to the outsider, also, that if an individual insures a parcel post package, receiving a duly authenticated receipt for the payment of his insurance, and that later the parcel is lost and the Post Office Department admits the loss, a most natural and sufficient course to propose would be for the individual to present his authenticated receipt, with the department's acknowledgment of loss, and cash it without more ado at any post office, exactly as he would any other cash voucher.

This, however, of course, is too simple to contemplate.

It might be added that it was not sheer disgust of the transaction that impelled our correspondent to give up his attempt to collect his insurance. A careful reading of Form 3812 discloses that the Government had set up a "Statute of Limitations" against him. One clause of the Form reads: "No indemnity will be paid for a lost insured parcel—(1) Unless application is made within six months from the date of mailing." A reference to the correspondent's dates will show that by the time, after several months of correspondence and delay, he had succeeded in obtaining the proper "form" on which to make his "application" for indemnity, the six months period specified had just expired, and the insurance paid for in good faith by him, had, by dictum of the Post Office Department, become void. No wonder our correspondent signs himself "Exasperated."

THE GROUND-HOG COULDN'T SEE HIS SHADOW, at least not in that eastern section of the United States which is the habitat of ground-hogs, so spring is coming early—and along with it real prosperity, if we may believe current reports. From the south we hear that cotton, despite a heavy advance, is selling more actively, with a resulting good effect on Southern business sentiment generally. In the west good snow covering has improved the fall planted crop outlook and grains are selling at the highest price in a generation. From New England come reports that advance business with many of the cotton and woolen fabric mills has exceeded expectations and that factories of a dozen sorts are running overtime. According to Bradstreet our export trade is increasing "in a perfectly marvellous way." War demands are taking up all loose stocks of a variety of products and stimulating an enormous additional output in others; domestic demand is growing, and there is less unemployment now than in December. And finally, stimulated by cheap money and low prices, speculation in securities has broadened and gives promise of still further accentuating the more cheerful feeling with which the American business world views the prospects of home and foreign trade expansion. It really looks as if 1915 would prove a good year.

"MADE IN U. S. A."—IS IT A DESIRABLE SLOGAN?

ALMOST every possible answer to the question "Is the 'Made in U. S. A.' slogan one to be pushed?" was received by Printers' Ink in the "forum" which it conducted recently among the heads of two-score of the largest American manufacturing and selling concerns. Two points are urged over and over, that it is in the last analysis the quality of an article that makes it sell and not its origin, and that such a policy is double-edged and will possibly hurt our trade in other countries. "Discrimination," writes one man, "always acts as a boomerang." Another argument advanced by J. Ogden Armour and others is that it is ridiculous to advertise goods of quality and unreliable and cheap goods under the same slogan, since no slogan can gain prestige under such use. Henry B. Joy, President of the Packard Motor Car Co., believes that our attitude toward business is unfavorable to the movement. Certain manufacturers hold that there is music in the words "foreign made," instance the blind demand for "English" caps, and they urge the "Made in U. S. A." trade mark as a means of breaking the back of this "superstition." E. T. Welch of the Welch Grape Juice Co. expresses the belief that the movement would stimulate manufacturers to improve their products. From many sides comes the statement that there is no virtue in a mere slogan. Many believe, too, that the country should "make haste slowly" in the matter and that the movement should have the authority of the government behind it.

The answers received by Printers' Ink seem to indicate that the manufacturers are pretty evenly divided between those who favor the "Made in U. S. A." scheme and those who are sceptical of its efficacy or actually opposed to it.

AMERICAN NEWSPAPERS AND PERIODICALS NOW TOTAL 24,724.

The 1915 edition of N. W. Ayer & Son's American Newspaper Annual and Directory lists 24,724 publications of all sorts. For the first time in its history, it appears without any advertising. The new publications are 1688, but against this number must be set off suspensions and consolidations sufficient to bring the net gain for the year down to 197, of which 7 belong in Canada. Canada's total number is 1557.

The number of daily newspapers in the United States is now placed at 2502; of weeklies, 16,323, and monthlies, 2981, an increase in each instance. The only classes to lose are in fortnightlies and semi-monthlies, which now stand at 57 and 291, respectively.

In Canada the dailies number 159, the weeklies 1057, and the monthlies 243. There was a slight loss in the number of dailies.

The number of dailies by sections is as follows: Middle Western States, 635; Western States, 450; Southern States, 405; Middle Atlantic, 291; Pacific Slope, 283; New York, 211; New England, 182; outlying territories, 45. The Middle Atlantic States were the only sections to lose in number; the loss was slight.

In the field of the weeklies, the Western States have 5259, the Middle Western States, 3316; the Southern States, 3154; Pacific Slope, 1414; Middle Atlantic, 1258; New York 1117; New England, 759; and outlying territories, 46. New York made the considerable gain of 43, and there were small gains or losses in the other sections.

The Middle Atlantic States, which lost in the number of dailies and weeklies, made the largest gains, 49, in the number of monthlies, which total 866. New York has 628 monthlies; Western States, 372; Middle Western States, 323; Pacific Slope, 227; New England, 195; outlying territories, 18.

The number of towns in which newspapers are published now reaches 11,817. The classified lists number 222, and include such up-to-date divisions as aeronautics, moving pictures, Esperanto, woman suffrage and anti-suffrage.

WOULD COST TWO AND A HALF MILLION TO EQUIP NEW YORK STATE WITH FREE TEXT BOOKS.

AFTER an investigation covering all the public schools of the State, Commissioner John H. Delaney of the Department of Efficiency and Economy sent to the New York State Legislature Jan. 21st, an estimate of the cost of supplying free text books to the pupils. The total cost to the State, according to the report, would be: For elementary schools, $1,785,904.82; for secondary schools, $749,057.36; total, $2,504,962.18.

The cost of annual renewal, based upon the estimated school registration of 1914-15, including only the books to be used in the prescribed course of instruction, would be $985,581.85, including $750,780.04 for elementary schools and $234,801.81 for secondary schools. The average cost for each pupil would be $1.23 in elementary schools and $4.84 in secondary schools. The total estimated school registration affected by the text-book question for the current school year is 1,594,610.

One result of the investigation was the demonstration of the lack of uniformity in the text books in use in teaching the same subjects. In the rural schools it was learned that adjacent school districts used entirely different books, and sometimes different books on the same subjects were used by the pupils in the same class. Even in New York City, with its centralized school system, uniformity does not prevail, 4081 separate titles being used.

VAGARIES OF BOOK-HUNTERS.*

Ten or fifteen years ago it was quite usual to meet with collections of title-pages formed by followers of the immortal Badford. These were to be seen quoted in booksellers' catalogues and displayed in the auction rooms, and were commonly disposed of for small sums of money—small, that is to say, in comparison with what would have been realized for the books themselves had they been allowed to remain in that state of life to which the authors and others had called them. Of late, collections of title-pages have not been very much in evidence anywhere, for it is universally felt that there is little or no romance surrounding the slaughter even of folios, to say nothing of smaller-sized victims, and for that reason these scrappy collections are huddled out of sight like family skeletons. The book-hunter of the present day has his foibles, it is true, but he has learned by experience and from the expostulatory remarks of others that wild freaks are completely out of place in a library, and so it has come to pass that books are treated in a different way from what they were only a couple of decades ago, and no one who has the smallest respect either for himself or his vocation would now either care or dare to form a collection of title-pages. Should he happen to own one either by purchase or under circumstances beyond his control, he will produce it, if at all, with apologies and sighs. It is abundantly manifest that the wicked man hath turned away from much of his wickedness.

The reason of this tremendous transformation must be put down to the credit of a rule which, though formulated and preached at one time by the élite only, has been insisted upon with such pertinacity that it has gradually become diffused throughout the whole world of collectors, no matter to what objects of interest they may direct their attention. This rule is, that taste and the pocket alike demand that be a book good, bad, or indifferent in its externals, it shall, nevertheless, be left untouched by its owner, who is but its temporary custodian, and a trustee for others who shall come after him. To rip out the title-page, no matter with what object, is an outrage on decency which, it is pleasant to find, is now appraised at its proper pitch of enormity. If the stamp-collector rejoice in the possession of a specimen with "original gum," and rate its interest and value higher on that account, shall the book-collector, who is the oldest, the most learned, and the most aristocratic of all collectors, give place in the matter of common-sense and discretion to the product of a frivolous age? Shall he cut initial letters from missals and other manuscripts, and insult the Shades of Füst and Schoeffer by making a senseless collection of colophons?

These things were in vogue at one time, but are now frowned down even by the most ignorant of mortals, since, to put the matter on no higher ground, the money value of old books has considerably increased of late years to his certain knowledge, and he believes that anything with curious type, the f's made so—f, and villainous prints scattered about the text, must ex necessitate rei be worth its weight in gold, and perhaps more. What a contrast is this little false, but preventive store of knowledge to the crass stupidity of the early years of the present century, as exemplified in the persons of the Bishops, Canons, and Chaplains of Lincoln Cathedral, who permitted the choir-boys to collect illuminated initials, and with that object to cut up with their pen knives scores of vellum manuscripts. A good many of the Caxtons from this same cathedral were purchased by Dibdin for the Althorpe collection, and will be found catalogued in "A Lincolne Nosegay." The Dean and Chapter, knowing little about books, and caring less, had disposed of them all for a "consideration," and thus without thought stripped themselves of their choicest possessions next to the cathedral itself.

Doubleday, Page & Co. say: "We had holiday displays of Conrad, O. Henry and Kipling, in Pittsburgh, Detroit, and Boston. This window contains some interesting photographs of these three authors, some manuscript pages from their books, a photograph of the Barque "Otogo," the vessel which Mr. Conrad first commanded, and samples of the various styles in which we publish these authors' works. It attracted a great deal of attention."

Of a truth, books have only recently come to be regarded as possessing a sentimental value altogether distinct from considerations of utility, and it is only within the compass of a comparatively few years that collectors have sprung up from the very stones to cry aloud, and to protest against such wanton acts of mutilation or destruction as the records of past days almost choke themselves in the echoing of. Only a little while ago "Grangerizing" was the favorite pastime of thousands of persons of elegant leisure, as Griswold called the lazy dullards of his generation, and what this involved would be whispered in corners but for the fact that it was for 200 years unblushingly shouted in the open day.

During all that period the teachings of the genuine bibliophiles had so passed from deed and truth into mere monotony of unbelieved phrase that no English was literal enough to convert the persons who went about seeking material, at vast expense, wherewith to extra-illustrate some inane book of polemics or proverbs.

Nicholas Ferrar, who kept the "Protestant Nunnery" at Little Gidding, in Huntingdonshire, was, I believe, the inventor of a system which was not fully developed until the publication of Granger's "Biographical History of England," but which is, nevertheless, directly or indirectly responsible for the condition of most of the imperfect volumes which are met with at every turn. The story of Nicholas Ferrar, assuming it to be true, there is little reason to doubt, makes it clear that King Charles I. was as bad or worse than anybody in this matter, for, had he not affected to admire the handiwork of this first and chief of sinners, the baneful practice of mutilating books for the sake of their illustrations, title-pages, or frontispieces, might never have become an aristocratic amusement, sanctified by tradition, and ennobled far beyond its deserts by kingly patronage. The Concordance which Ferrar showed the King escaped the wrath of the fanatic Hugh Peters and his crew, and, after many vicissitudes, is now safely lodged in the British Museum, a warning to all who may at any time seek to revive a practice which would, in these days of emulation and competition, burn with a white heat.

In Wordsworth's "Ecclesiastical Biography" the story of Nicholas Ferrar is set out at length. There is no need to enter into minute details, as the tale has since become stereotyped, and is found reproduced in a dozen different places at least. Shortly, it appears that in June, 1634, King Charles I. was staying with the Earl of Westmoreland at Ape-thorpe, and from thence sent one of his gentlemen to the home of Nicholas Ferrar, hard by, to "intreat" a sight of a Concordance which he had heard had recently been completed. When Ferrar was on the Continent some time previously, he had bought up a great number of prints by the best masters, illustrative of historical passages of the Old and New Testaments, and these he afterwards used for ornamenting various compilations of the Scriptures, among them a "full harmony or concordance of the four Evangelists, adorned with many beautiful pictures, which required more than a year for the composition, and was divided into 150 heads or chapters."

This was the Concordance that King Charles was so anxious to look at, and which, indeed, he admired so much that he never rested until he had obtained one like it for his own library. Both books are now in the British Museum, the original having been acquired about three years ago, and the one in the King's Library from George II., who had inherited the royal collection of books and manuscripts.

From the point of view of Nicholas Ferrar, there was certainly no harm in this process of extra-illustrating. There is no reason to believe that he had gone about tearing out plates from books, or done anything else which in any respect, save one, could be regarded as objectionable in the slightest degree. There was, and is, however, one objection to his procedure, namely, the very bad example he set to unscrupulous people who, in after years, rose up in their thousands and commenced to rip and tear with diabolical enterprise. These were the days of Granger's "Biographical History of England"—hence the verb to Grangerize—when people went about searching for portraits of celebrities mentioned in the text to paste between the leaves in their proper places. If Granger incidentally mentioned that someone had been conveyed to the Tower, and subsequently had the good fortune to escape out of a certain window, books would be ransacked and mutilated to provide illustrations of (1) the Tower of London from the N., S., E., or W., as the case might be; (2) portrait of the prisoner; (3) view of the window from which he let himself down; and finally, if Laus Deo, a letter in his handwriting or a section of the rope which had made his escape possible could only be unearthed, great was the joy in the camp of the Philistine.

This mania for Grangerizing grew till it assumed enormous proportions. One enthusiast tried to illustrate Rees' "Cyclopædia," but died before he had accomplished very much in comparison with what remained to be done. Mr. Crowle's copy of Pennant's "History of London" cost that gentleman £7,000 from first to last, and there is a book of this kind in the Bodleian which has engulfed nearly double that amount. It consists of Clarendon's "History of the Rebellion," swollen to sixty-seven large volumes, representing forty years of intense application. The vagaries of a whole army of book-collectors are reflected from every page of works such as these, for a man must necessarily be a book-collector first, and a Grangerizer after, else would material fail him. Happily for the peace of books, the mania for extra-illustrating has practically died out. The expense is too great, life too short, the knowledge and taste—of a kind—too laborious to acquire, to endow this pastime with a permanent and stable interest.

And yet there is another vagary, eccentricity, freak, or what you will, which, for cool deliberate folly, has never been equaled even among Ferrar's admirers. The fun in this case consists in wilfully destroying a certain number of scarce and valuable books in order to heighten the importance and value of the survivors. Three or four collectors whose tastes are similar—that is to say, who accumulate works by the same author—will take stock of their belongings. Thanks to the Grangerizers, a portrait will perhaps be missing from one volume, and a plate from another; some disciple of an ancient Goth may have removed a title-page or two; one copy may be fairer to look upon than another; a leaf or two may be injured which in another copy, imperfect perhaps in other respects, may be above suspicion. Our collectors have duplicates, for they have been striving all their lives to prevent anyone else from obtaining any copy, good, bad, or indifferent, of the scarcest works of the author or authors they think they honor by their notice. They make a "pool" of all the volumes which are not immaculate; complete or perfect as many of them as possible, apportion them, and destroy the remainder. They will burn a work which is perfect, provided each has a copy in better condition, and this is to prevent you or me, or anyone else, from sharing in their sacrilegious joy. When we reflect that, from the nature of things, it is only the scarcest books that can be so treated with effect, we shall begin to realize the sinister importance of the act. Practices such as these are the product of the present age; they are not common, far from it, but they are not unusual. And yet the perpetrators mean no harm, for, as they would very truly say, if their practices were generally known and complaint were made, "You can, if you like, read So-and-so without the least difficulty, for his works have been reprinted many times, and it is not either essential or advisable that the very scarcest edition of all should be in your hands." There is in this argument a little logical force, but no decency for anyone to dissect.

Bookmen of the present day, or at least those among them who aspire to the highest seats in the collectors' Pantheon, are invariably bound by rule, and it is this hard and fast bondage that makes them do things which, if left to themselves, they would probably be the first to deprecate. To accumulate any considerable number of really scarce books is the labor of a life-time, and to obtain immaculate copies necessitates not merely the possession of plenty of money, but a very great deal of energy, discrimination, and tact. The old school of general lovers is dying out. People now very seldom buy up whole libraries, or send out colossal orders to gratify a mere love of possession. They work by the book of arithmetic, cautiously, slowly, and with one main object ever in view. In this they are right, but in this also they fail, a paradox which is no paradox at all when it is remembered that book-hunters are of many kinds and of varying degrees of intelligence.

For instance, though there is undoubtedly something unique and strange about the very appearance of a library of extremely diminutive books, the collector of works of this kind is "cabin'd, cribb'd, confin'd," within the compass of about two square inches at the most, and probably does not expect to derive either instruction or amusement from their pages when he has succeeded in reading them with the aid of a microscope. His rule is inflexible. Shakespeare in folio must give place to "The Mite"; "The English Bijou Almanac" for 1837 is, in his eyes, one of the choicest of all volumes. Here literature and the rule are in conflict, and books become bric-à-brac, as they must do when any rule is too rigidly applied to them. Yet there are many collectors of small books both here and abroad, and prices rule inordinately high in consequence.

Very probably "The Mite" is the smallest book printed from movable type in the world. Its size is only  $\frac{5}{8}$  in. by  $\frac{3}{4}$  in., and it would certainly be an exceedingly difficult matter to reduce this measurement. If anybody could do so, it would be M. Salomon of Paris, who has long been a collector of these microscopical curiosities, or the trustees of the British Museum, who have a box full of them. In 1781 a little book called the "Alarm Almanac" made its appearance in Paris, and though printed with movable type and not engraved, like nearly all these little works are, measured only 19 millimètres by 14. There are very nearly  $25\frac{1}{2}$  millimètres to the inch, and this specimen consequently runs "The Mite" very close indeed. The "English Bijou Almanac" for 1837, however, completely eclipses both, but unfortunately it is engraved and not printed from type. This book measures  $\frac{3}{4}$  in. in height,  $\frac{1}{2}$  in. wide and  $\frac{1}{8}$  in. in thickness. The authoress was "L.E.L.," Letitia Elizabeth Landon, an almost forgotten poetess, whose sad marriage and untimely death are known to only a few students of Victorian literature. Some of her poems were printed in the "Bijou" for the first and only time, so that this tiny volume is of some literary importance. Its title is so minute that a magnifying glass is necessary to read it. Its thirty-seven leaves are devoted, inter alia, to several pages of music and some portraits, including one of James Fenimore Cooper, the novelist. Even small books have a history and an importance of their own, but to collect them to the exclusion of every other book is surely a pronounced "vagary."

M. Salomon has more than 200 specimens, but then he does not absolutely confine his attention to midgets. I never knew nor heard of more than one collector who was so infatuated as to do so, and he had forty-five volumes of the kind, all different, in which he took such extreme delight that he was ever on the lookout for more.

Another collector with whom I am personally acquainted has read this chapter through at my express request, and consequently cannot reasonably say that I have endeavored to question the soundness of his discretion behind his back. He accumulates books with a history. If a book has no history, he will have none of it. In his library are many volumes which I must confess I have a great regard for, but which I know can never be mine, for each is unique, and the whole collection is destined for a public museum in the end.

He has a book bound in what looks like dry and hard parchment, warped with damp and stained here and there with reddish brown. It is a copy of Johnson's "Lives and Adventures of the most Famous Highwaymen, Murderers, and Street Robbers, etc.," printed in folio in 1736, a scarce book at any time, but under existing circumstances past praying for. The parchment is human cuticle, stripped from the back of a criminal who had swung at Tyburn for a series of atrocious butcheries, which are chronicled with considerable minuteness in the pages of the "Newgate Calendar." When the corpse was cut down it was, according to the custom then prevailing, carted "home," and exhibited to gaping crowds at so much a head, and finally sold to the surgeons. From them a prior owner of this delightful volume obtained the skin, which, when tanned, formed an appropriate and never-to-be-forgotten binding, to all appearances sweating great smears of blood. It is only the damp, of course, or perhaps some defect in the curing process, which is responsible for these blemishes; but they seem to cry for vengeance, still greater and greater vengeance, against an inhuman wretch long since departed more or less in peace.

This is the only gruesome thing in the library, and I know as a fact that it excites more interest than all the rest of the books put together, though many, not to say most, of them are distinctly worthy of the closest attention. One volume belonged to Charles Lamb, who has made a perfect wreck of it, and half a dozen or more have the signature of "Will Shakespeare" scribbled in an Elizabethan hand on the title-pages, and in all sorts of places. These were once among the choicest possessions of Samuel Ireland, of Norfolk Street, Strand, the father of William Henry Ireland, a liar and a solicitor's clerk, who, as all the world knows, was for a time, and in very truth, mistaken for the great dramatist himself. Then there are books with inscriptions, undoubtedly genuine, of Bradshaw the regicide, Algernon Sidney, and many other persons of the highest political eminence in their day; books, too, which have belonged to Young the poet—distinguishable at a glance by the multitude of turned-down leaves—and the unfortunate Louis XVI.

This library is, of its kind, perhaps as important as any that has ever been formed, and yet it only numbers some 250 volumes, so supremely difficult is it, as a rule, to trace the possession even of books for more than a generation or two. Great men have ever been chary of their names, or at least it would seem so from the number of unimportant signatures and inscriptions we meet with day by day.

A long and very interesting chapter might be written on "Inscriptions in Books," and it must be confessed that a really important signature or comment adds so very appreciably to the sentimental value of the volume in which it is found, that it is not surprising that Oliver Wendell Holmes conjured up a pleasant train of reflection, in his inimitable style, based upon the name of a former owner of his own copy of the "Colloquies of Erasmus," which, by the way, my friend is extremely anxious to possess himself of, but will probably never obtain. In this instance the personality of the "Autocrat of the Breakfast-Table" obscures all else, and gives the book a distinct history of its own—a history that invests it with an importance and value it could never claim of itself. To find out all we can about the former owners of books which we ourselves take pleasure in is no frivolous task, and the pity is that our opportunities for doing so are limited. The book-plate has very nearly put an end to owner's autographs, and being easy to remove, affords little or no guarantee of ownership. And book-plates have been in use in this country for more than 200 years.

No doubt everyone who has anything to do with books, whether as writer, producer, or collector, can call to mind the eccentricities of his neighbors with regard to them. I call it extremely eccentric conduct on the part of any man to persist in collecting odd volumes, and to studiously ignore complete sets. Yet I knew an old gentleman—now dead, and his books littering the stalls of Farringdon Street and elsewhere—who did this, year after year, and for many years, with the inevitable result. He was fond of literature, and the pleasure he derived in reading was part and parcel of his existence.

It was an axiom with him, however, that anything which is worth having, and any knowledge worth acquiring, must be laboriously worked for; and he would instance numerous authorities who have taught this truth by example as well as by precept. He would say, "If I go out and buy a Bible for £500, because it is old and scarce, do you think I shall derive as much benefit and solace from its pages as if I had invested a trifle with the fixed determination to read what I had acquired and to follow its teachings?"

"No, certainly not," is the obvious and truthful reply to that; but this would appear to be different from buying one volume of, say, Pope's works when there ought to be twenty, and trusting to enterprise not unmingled with luck to discover the remaining nineteen. To this, however, he would not agree, and, to do him justice, he did not preach one thing and perform another. His theory was that, if the perusal of an odd volume leads the reader to long for the possession of its fellows, it is better that he should search for them until he finds them, than that he should have them to his hand, as it were, ready made.

Carlyle intimated that a man had far better study the title-page of any book worth the trouble of looking at than read the whole text with a vacant mind, and no doubt he was right, though this, too, seems to be an entirely distinct matter from the general principle that nothing can be learned without a maximum of inconvenience. Such a conclusion is rather a straining of the position insisted upon by Nero's tutor that no one should collect more books than he can read, and that a multitude of books only distracts the mind. Therefore was it that Francis Bissari in the year 1750 designed a plate, which he pasted in the few volumes he possessed, and which consequently is now extremely scarce. "Ex-Libris civis Francisci Bissari," he says, "Distrahit animum librorum multitudo, itaque cum legere non possis quantum habueris, sat est habere quantum legas. Seneca. Ep. 2."

Still, as I have intimated, the old gentleman had his way and his day, and when he died his books were all despatched to the auction rooms. It took three men more than a week to pack them in boxes. There were books under every bed in the house and every nook and cranny was full of them. There were, altogether, many thousands of volumes, and nearly all were odd. If a series were found to be complete, as sometimes happened, it was sure to be made up of volumes belonging to different editions, and, naturally enough, in different bindings. The auctioneers did what they could, and sold the vast majority in "parcels" for a mere song, which in truth was all they were worth.

This peculiar form of book-collecting, though apparently strange, is, and always has been, very usual, for the vast majority of readers are poor. One volume will cost less, proportionately, than the complete set of which it forms part; and, moreover, we are again face to face with the argument that it is better to master the contents of one volume than to have a mere superficial knowledge of a dozen or more. The only thing is that, as the world wags at present, the advice is erratic, and the system of buying books in sections one that cannot be recommended. If we could be sure of a hundred years of life, then things might be different. Sed Ars longa, vita brevis est.

And so it happens that the vagaries of book-hunters are often passing strange. Some, like Sir Thomas Phillipps, will buy largely, and never even open the cases in which they arrive. Others will hide them in all sorts of out-of-the-way places, while others again will cut them to pieces, or in some other way destroy them utterly. It is the most usual thing, for me, at any rate, and therefore presumably for others who are known to write about books.

or to give the reports of the auction rooms, to receive a bundle of title-pages as samples of the volumes to which they belong, with a request for information as to how they ought to be bound, and what they are worth. Some collectors—real bona fide collectors these—start life with strong opinions as to the usefulness of books, and, after the manner of Grolier, though without his discretion, open their doors to all sorts and conditions of men, only to close them later with a firm resolve that, come what come may, they will never again allow any friend whomsoever even to gaze upon their store. Some, too, are so was Libri, who, as Inspector-General of French Libraries, under Louis Philippe, presented himself, from first to last, with books of the value of more than £20,000, among them a fine MS. of the Pentateuch, which he sold to the late Lord Ashburnham on condition that it was not to be published for twenty years. In 1868 the time expired, and then the matter was traced home, to his memory's shame.

This conduct of Libri in selling what did not belong to him puts him, indeed, on a level, in point of turpitude, with the young divinity student of Chicago commonly called "The Champion Biblioklept of America." In vast-deeply immersed in their all-absorbing hobby that they have no clear conception of the difference between meum and tuum. Estimable in every respect but one, and scrupulously honest to a degree in all matters of daily intercourse, they yet fail in this one supreme trial. And yet they are absolved; for these unfortunates are not thieves but eccentrics, who would no more think of selling the objects they have mistaken for their own, than they would of getting wealth by false pretences. Pope Innocent X, when still Monsignor Pamphilio, was found in the possession of a book he could not satisfactorily account for, and the ludicrous part of the matter was that Du Moustier, who claimed that it had been abstracted from his library, was subsequently proved to have stolen it himself. Then, again, Catherine de Medici sequestered the entire library of Marshal Strozzi, and on complaint promised to pay for it by instalments, which, of course, she never did. Hearne hints more than once that Sir Thomas Bodley was eccentric, and when Moore, Bishop of Ely, and father of English Black-Letter Collectors, went to dine with a bibliophile, as was his wont, the latter would, if he were wise, spend the morning in removing out of sight, and, therefore, out of temptation's way, the choicest of his possessions. But the king of all these suspicious characters ness of conception the latter was a mere tyro, for he only stole a few hundred books of small value from the Chicago Public Library. The motive of both men was, however, the same, and it was that which, according to some consciences, made them thieves. After all, it is this motive that must be primarily considered in all ethical questions such as those which underlie, to some extent at least, the vagaries of every book-hunter who ever was born to hunger and thirst for Caxton's types, and paper white as snow, bound in a dream by the Gascon's magic touch.

THE PHILADELPHIA BOOKTRADE.

The twenty-first anniversary of the founding of The New Staton Store in Philadelphia was celebrated on January 27, when the store kept "open house" from two until ten o'clock. Mr. Staton, who was president of the Philadelphia Booksellers' Association during the past year, is known as a bookseller who not only is fond of his business, but who takes an active interest in the books he handles. His store is particularly strong in its juvenile department, for Mr. Staton believes in giving the children wholesome reading, realizing that they will soon be readers and owners of good books if properly directed. In addition to books, The New Staton Store carries music, victrolas and stationery

On or about February 20, George W. Jacobs & Co. will remove to 1628 Chestnut Street, combining at that location the retail business heretofore conducted at 1210 Walnut Street, and the publishing business formerly at 208 West Washington Square.

This removal is a part of a new and significant epoch in bookselling in Philadelphia. For many years the profit in retailing books was so small that the stores were forced to seek inexpensive locations. With the appearance of better conditions, however, the stores have been returning to the leading thoroughfares, and there are now located on Chestnut Street, within a short distance of each other, the American Sunday School Union, the American Baptist Publication Society, H. W. Fisher & Company, and George W. Jacobs & Company. With these four in close proximity, it will make 17th and Chestnut Streets a book center.

M. A. WHITMAN JOINS HAMMING PUBLISHING COMPANY.

M. A. WHITMAN, for a number of years sales manager of Rand, McNally & Co.'s trade book department, has become a member of the Hamming Publishing Co., of Chicago, which becomes, in consequence, the Hamming-Whitman Co. Mr. Whitman is well known in trade circles, and his knowledge of the book business will influence the future policies of the firm.

The Hamming-Whitman Co. announce many important additions to their list during the year. One of the most timely of these will be "Uncle Jeremiah at the Panama Pacific Exposition," by C. M. Stevens, whose "Uncle Jeremiah at the Columbian Exposition" enjoyed a sale of over half a million copies.

PARCEL POST INSURANCE.

January 25th, 1915.

Editor Publishers' Weekly:

May we call your attention to what seems to us as an instance of Post Office red-tape-ism run mad, which would be humorous if it were not so exasperating. It may be of interest to other members of the trade, who, like ourselves, have been led by the roseate reports of the Postmaster General into the fond delusion that the United States Parcel Post affords not only a reasonable but, through its insurance provision, a safe means of transmitting merchandise.

In June last we mailed a large quantity of identical parcels to various points in the United States, insuring them all at a stated value of $6 each. Two of these parcels were lost by the Post Office Department and have not yet been recovered.

The following is the history of the case to date seriatim. In September, 1914, we learned that neither of these parcels had been received by the addressees and made inquiry, by letter, at the mailing office, one of the branch station offices in this city. We were asked to fill out a voluminous complaint form, No. 1510 if our memory serves us, a form, by the way, which had no special relation to insured packages and asked, as a result, a considerable number of entirely irrelevant questions. Some weeks later we received due notification that, although careful search had been made, "the investigation, thus far, has discovered no irregularity in the service to which the loss can be ascribed. The facts in the case, however, shall be reported to the Post Office Inspector in charge of the division at New York for continuation of the investigation and it is possible the cause of non-delivery will yet be ascertained or the article recovered." Nothing was said about paying the insurance indemnity.

Having waited several months and received no further word from the Post Office authorities, we, on December 24th, wrote a follow-up letter of inquiry. We received promptly two copies of our old friend form No. 1510, which we were requested to fill out as before. We thereupon wrote that we had already, some months previously, filled out this form and that we had been told to await the result of further investigation, and politely hinted that the parcels had been insured and we labored under the impression that we had something coming to us.

Receiving no answer to this letter, we wrote again on January 7th, to which also we received no answer except that we were advised verbally that the branch station "had done all they could" and "that they thought that we could get more satisfaction by application to the Post Office Department at Washington." We thereupon wrote a letter describing the circumstances of our case to the Post Office Department at Washington, D. C., and shortly after received a courteous two (2) page letter stating that we should make application to the mailing office for still another copy of our old friend form No. 1510, which we should fill out, and should "at the same time request to be supplied with copies of form No. 3812 and instructions as to their execution, if you desire to file claims for indemnity covering the loss of the two insured parcels referred to."

Having by this time expended time and energy considerably in excess of the value of the original parcels, we were naturally getting rather anxious to secure that indemnity. In an unlucky moment, therefore, we rashly sent for copies of form No. 3812. As we fear that our description will hardly do full justice to it we are sending it to you herewith.

It is needless to say that we have now despaired of securing our insurance, but feel that at least our experience may warn other members of the trade.

"EXASPERATED."

BOOKTRADE ASSOCIATIONS.

NEW YORK BOOKSELLERS' LEAGUE SCHOOL.

DESPITE a cold downpour of rain, over eighty people gathered at the Scribners' store on Monday night at the first meeting of 1915 of the Booksellers' League School. They came from as far away as Newark, New Jersey, and Kingston, New York—and, better still, they were most of them book clerks, the very class the school has been trying so hard to reach.

Mr. Wood, the speaker of the evening, who has been lecturing on better bookselling in several of the Eastern cities, remarked jocularly at the outset that he and Elbert Hubbard are the only two men who can make money by talking about books—and he is not obtaining money under false pretenses, either. Among other things, Mr. Wood told of Burrows Bros.' system of pushing special books. "We are not in the book business to make best sellers," he said. The novel is the only book Burrows Bros. leaves to sell itself. Practically every specialized line has been worked by the firm, by means of printed matter (from which as high as 468 sales have resulted from 2500 prospects), by telephone, and by sending the book out for inspection on the return-if-not-satisfied basis. The firm has found that an architect never refuses to look at a new book, while effective work has been done with such highly specialized books as those on real estate by sending a copy first to the secretary of the local real estate association.

When asked if such a sample was presented to the secretary of the association, Mr. Wood replied emphatically, "Never!" Burrows Bros. presents no copies, gives no discounts and never marks a book down from its published price—unless, of course, it is shop-worn. He told of finding recently several copies of a novel of 1910 in stock. A salesman in the book department and another in the stationery department were asked to read it and report to Mr. Wood, who himself took it home to read. The verdict was unanimous to the effect that the book was a "Jim Dandy," and within two days six copies had been sold, all at the original price.

Mr. Wood also urged the necessity for the store-owner to "get on the floor with his clerks." Sixty-three per cent. of our booksellers, he said, do not get into the front of the store where they can meet and come to know their customers. Also, he said, the bookseller should not hesitate to do anything he might ask his clerks to do.

He made an especial appeal to the booksellers to meet the publisher half-way. "Show him you are in earnest and that you are actually getting results," he said, "and he'll meet you in the same spirit."

A few of the other sparks from the dynamo were: "Sell your own territory before you go after prospects in the other fellow's city." "Don't be afraid and suspicious of the competition across the street." "Know your customers." "The single title generally makes the best window display." "Follow up every chance to keep your firm's name before your customers." "Get together with your clerks occasionally to talk things over." And, "Don't think for a minute that you cannot do here in New York, or any place else, just what we have done in Cleveland—if you are willing to get out and hustle."

BALTIMORE BOOKSELLERS.

THE Baltimore booksellers entertained their clerks at dinner, Friday evening, January 29, to hear Mr. John J. Wood, of Burrows Bros., of Cleveland, speak on practical phases of bookselling. Mr. C. C. Shoemaker, of Penn Pub. Co.; Mr. Charles Stevens, of Rust Craft Shop; and Mr. Francis Evans, of Volland &

Co., were guests. The following concerns were represented: Hochschild, Kohn & Co.; Stewart & Co., Medical & Standard Books Co., Lycett, Harrison & Sons, J. Lanahan, Methodist Protestant Book Co., Dulany-Vernay, The Norman-Remington Co.

EXHIBITION OF FILM BEFORE PROFESSIONAL EXHIBITORS NOT PUBLIC PERFORMANCE.

DOES the exhibition of cinematograph films by the manufacturer or dealer to an audience of fifty prospective customers, all present by invitation to select films suitable for their respective theaters, constitute an "exhibition"?

This question was raised in a recent case in London, in which the Attorney-General brought suit on behalf of the London County Council against the Vitagraph Co., Ltd., charging a violation of section 1 of the Cinematograph Act, 1909. The immediate point involved was whether the Vitagraph Co. had violated the regulations for securing safety by "exhibiting" inflammable films in premises not licensed for the purpose. But the case bears directly upon that mooted point in copyright law, the distinction between "public" and "private" performance. According to the English Author, Justice Astbury held that the exhibition in question was not an "exhibition." He interpreted the act as referring to places of public entertainment and not as including a case where a dealer, bona fide, in the exercise of his trade of selling or renting out films, runs the film through the machine in the presence of one or more customers.

POSTAL NOTES.

BILL TO BAR FROM MAILS RELIGIOUS CRITICISM.

BILLS recently introduced into Congress giving the Postmaster General power to bar from the mails matter reflecting on any form of religious worship, were the subject of a hearing before the House Committee on Post Offices and Post Roads Feb. 1st.

Mr. Fitzgerald of New York, who introduced one bill, said that the existing law does not allow the Postmaster General to bar from the mails certain indecent and scurrilous matter.

Representative Maher of New York said that the Roman Catholics in his district were anxious to curb some of the activities of six publications. He mentioned only two—the Menace and the Yellowjacket.

Rev. Dr. McKim, an Episcopal clergyman, characterized the proposed legislation as inconsistent with the principles of American liberty. "It constitutes an attack upon the freedom of the press," he maintained. "I have no desire to defend the scurrilous and libellous and filthy publications, but we should not get at them by striking at the liberty of the press."

Rev. Mr. Williams said that the legislation is unnecessary because the courts have always been able to handle charges of such a character.

SHIPPERS COMPLAIN OF PARCEL POST SERVICE.

ACCORDING to a recent article in the New York Herald, the new parcel post, admirable though it is in many ways, is not yet giving entirely satisfactory service. One objection is that the government piles twenty pound packages on top of tender one pound packages. It has been noted by shippers that the postal authorities are not making any adequate provision for sorting out the packages and for keeping the strong from crushing the weak.

Although it is possible now to insure parcel post packages, the Herald adds that shippers complain that the arrangement is far from being as advantageous as it looks. Some time it may be possible to collect for the damage done to the crushed parcels, but those who ever have tried to collect anything from the government know that it takes a long, long time to get to the Treasury.

The impression seems to be among business men that there will have to be some radical changes in the way the Post Office Department is doing this parcel post business, but just how the problem is to be worked out is still giving them considerable thought and anxiety. Houses that are sending out many hundreds of packages a day find that complaints are piling up on them which require immediate attention. They have to make good to their customers and then extricate the explanations from the postal authorities at some later day.

Merchants are insisting, too, on a more convenient way of mailing packages, as places where packages can be deposited are comparatively few.

OBITUARY NOTES.

S. L. WILLARD, for many years with A. C. McClurg & Co., of Chicago, died on January 22 at his home in Redwood City, California. Mr. Willard was a resident of Chicago until 1908, when he removed to California for the betterment of his health. His long experience in the publishing department well qualified him to handle the McClurg line on the coast, which he has continued to do, maintaining an office and stock in San Francisco.

MRS. J. W. SHOEMAKER, principal of the National School of Elocution and Oratory, Shakespearean reader and dramatic elocutionist, and a widely known educator, passed away, February 1, 1915, at the residence of her son, Frank W. Shoemaker, Wayne, Pa. Mrs. Shoemaker was the widow of Professor J. W. Shoemaker, founder of the National School and a pioneer in the teaching of elocution. She was the mother of Frank W. Shoemaker and the aunt of Charles C. Shoemaker, both of the Penn Publishing Company. During her lifetime she wrote or edited a number of books on elocution.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

McClure's Magazine will, with the May issue, increase its type page from its present 224-line size to 680 lines, tabloid size.

begins a new series of stories in the March issue of To-day's Magazine.

EDWARD W. HAZEN will resign, on April 1, as advertising director of the Curtis Publishing Co., after fourteen years with the Curtis force, and he will be succeeded by William Boyd, who has for the past six years been manager of the Chicago office. Mr. Hazen's plans for the future include nothing more at this time than a complete rest for a full year. He will probably spend most of his time on his Connecticut farm and in hunting and golfing.

FRANK A. MUNSEY has taken six floors in the new twenty-story office building now in process of construction at 8 West Fortieth street, New York City, facing the Public Library, to which he will move all his executive and magazine offices about May 1. The ground floor of the space under lease to Mr. Munsey will be fitted up as a bank, and in this he will open a trust company on the completion of the building, or soon thereafter. The Munsey publication offices are now in the Flatiron Building.

HENRY WOODHOUSE, editor of Flying, the official organ of the Aero Club of America, has purchased the subscription list of Aero and Hydro, an aviation weekly of Chicago, which suspended publication last fall. Mr. Woodhouse and his associates will establish a new weekly magazine, the Aerial Age, with publication offices at 503 Fifth avenue. He will also continue Flying as a monthly. H. Chadwick Hunter of Washington, D. C., will become editor of the Aerial Age; Walter H. Phipps, associate editor; Robert Pluym, foreign news editor; Henry Woodhouse, contributing editor, and George B. Wagner, business manager. Henry Woodhouse is president of the company and F. Harrison Higgins, son of former Governor Higgins, is vice-president. The new weekly will publish the news of aviation and aviators and will also have a department devoted to technical developments.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE NEW "Who's Who" (Macmillan) contains about 25,000 biographies.

OTTO HARRASSOWITZ, the well-known Leipzig bookdealer, announces that he has taken his son Hans into partnership.

"CONTRARY MARY," by Temple Bailey, will be published by the Penn Publishing Co. on March 1, and not February 5, as we announced earlier.

HARPER & BROTHERS are sending out a little book-mark advertising their books, at the top of which is an attractive bookplate which may be detached along a perforated line and pasted in the front of the book.

RICHARD A. FOLEY, of the Richard A. Foley Advertising Agency, will lecture to the Philadelphia class in book salesmanship at the William Penn High School, February 10, on the general subject of advertising.

IT IS ANNOUNCED that Dr. Charles Sarolea, the noted Belgian scholar and author of "The Anglo-German Problem," is to come to this country on an official mission to lay the case of Belgium before the American public.

"THE YELLOW TICKET," the play by Michael Morton, which tells of an innocent Russian girl who is "hounded down" by the Russian police system, has just been issued in novelized form by the H. K. Fly Co.

ARRANGEMENTS HAVE JUST BEEN COMPLETED by Houghton Mifflin Company for the handling of their business in Australasia. Their general agents will be Henry W. Peabody & Co., of Sydney; selling agents, T. C. Lothian & Co., Pty., Ltd., 100 Flinders Street, Melbourne.

"MOLLY," the story of a cheery country lassie, by Jean Louise de Forest, will be published by Sully & Kleinteich on February 20. At the same time will appear the Nations of the War Series, six little handbooks, edited by L. G. Redmond-Howard, presenting the history of France, Russia, Germany, Belgium, Austria and Japan in a condensed, readable form.

D. APPLETON & Co. have just issued two new volumes in the series of South American Handbooks. "Chile" and "Argentina," both by G. J. Mills, are intended, like the other volumes in the series, to supply reliable information concerning natural resources, climate, industrial development and finances of the countries treated.

HENRY MALKAN, New York, has become selling agent in the United States for the "Argentine Year Book, 1914," and the "English Address Book of the Argentine Republic," both of which were printed in London for Robert Grant & Co., of Buenos Aires. The two form a very complete index to the political and commercial activities of the republic.

"WHAT IS WRONG WITH GERMANY," a new book by W. Harbutt Dawson, author of more than a dozen volumes on German affairs, will be published early in February by Longmans, Green & Co. Mr. Dawson, a former pupil of Treitschke's, finds three parties in Germany responsible for the present crisis—the Kaiser, the war-faction, and the nation as a whole.

BRENTANO'S ANNOUNCE a new and cheaper edition of Mügge's "Friedrich Nietzsche; His Life and Work." The first part of the book gives the life of Nietzsche; the second part of eighteen sections deals with his writings, the third part consists of an appreciation and a critique of the man and his writings, and the fourth part is a bibliography of Nietzsche's works.

BOOKSELLERS' ASSISTANTS now and again get into the bibliographies as authors, as well as publishers. J. W. Frings of W. H. Smith & Sons, London, is the latest debutant. He is the author of "God in the Universe," a spirited essay which follows closely the suggestion that science is what we know, philosophy what we think, and religion what we feel, respecting the universe. Wm. Rider & Sons of London are his publishers.

A BRAND-NEW TRAVEL BOOK that should add much to the interest of any voyage is "Nature Notes for Ocean Voyagers" (Lippincott) by Capt. A. Carpenter and Capt. D. Wilson-Barker, which gives the shrewd observation of these old sea-salts upon all the natural aspects of life at sea. Among the other books which Lippincott is just publishing is "The Rose Garden Husband" by Margaret Widdemer.

JOSEPH B. GILDER, well known in the book trade, is now secretary of the Industrial Finance Corporation of New York which conducts the "Morris Plan" industrial loans, a credit bank for the man who cannot maintain banking facilities and has as assets only his character and his work. The Morris Plan loans, which enable a man to borrow at the legal rates and pay back the principal in instalments, has already been successfully tried in a dozen states.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN Co. announce for February 20: "Kitchener: Organizer of Victory," by Harold Begbie; "Conciliation and Arbitration in the Coal Industry of America," by A. E. Sufferin; "The Life of Edward Rowland Sill," by W. B. Parker; "The Higher Individualism," by Edward Scribner Ames; "Welfare as an Economic Quantity," by G. P. Watkins; "Katy Gaumer," a novel, by Elsie Singmaster; and a new edition of Ploetz's "Handbook of Universal History."

SCHOOL CHILDREN are everywhere starting on the second and final lap of the school year which is to end in Commencement—with its accompanying shower of graduation presents. In addition to "The Girl Graduate's Scrap Book," "My Golden School Days," and the other old favorites, the Reilly & Britton Co. is this year offering a new "memory book," "The Stunt Book," a general record book, with departments for "stunts," sports and pranks, both in and out of school hours.

LOTS OF BOOKS HAVE BEEN "movie-ized," and now, just to prove that "it's a poor rule," etc., we have a "movie" book-ized. While the Universal Film Co. was preparing "Damon and Pythias" for the screen, it was suggested that the story, as worked out in the photoplay, would make a book of considerable interest. Albert Payson Terhune was engaged to write the book, and it is published by Grosset & Dunlap. An especial effort is being made to push sales among the seven-thousand-odd lodges of the Knights of Pythias.

TWO WAR BOOKS WORTHY OF NOTE will be issued by Scribner's early in February: "Germany Embattled: an American Interpretation" by Oswald Garrison Villard, editor of the New York Post, first states fairly the case of Germany and then shows why American traditions render it impossible for most Americans to agree with her. "The German Emperor as Shown in His Public Utterances" throws an interesting light on that modern Cæsar, by means of direct quotations from his addresses with an introduction and running comment by Prof. Gauss.

ACCORDING TO THE Lower Wall Street Business Men's Association, Massachusetts is given "excessive prominence" in the chronicling of the early history of our country at the expense of New York, and to correct this "grievous error," a committee, appointed by the president of the association, will, it is reported, shortly offer prizes of $1,000, $500 and $250 for an accurate short history of New York State. George H. Kunz, president of the American Scenic and Historic Society, is chairman of the committee in charge of the competition.

WHY DID GOOD-LOOKING MISS CARTERET board the steamer at Liverpool hours before passengers were supposed to come aboard, traveling under an assumed name, with a rare jewel stolen from a famous collection in her possession; why does the mysterious young man begin making violent love to her, and—mystery of mysteries!—who gets that death card, the Knave of Spades? These are the things Louis Joseph Vance tells about in "Sheep's Clothing," which Little, Brown & Co. will publish on February 13. At the same time will appear "Homeburg Memories," a fresh spasm by George Fitch.

SMALL, MAYNARD AND COMPANY announce their business personnel for the year 1915 as follows: Ralph T. Hale, president, in charge of editorial department; Henry P. Dowst, general manager, in charge of advertising and sales promotion; Charles W. Sheen, treasurer; Clarence V. Souther, in charge of manufacturing; Francis J. Sloane, representative New York and east of Chicago, 36 West 37th St., New York City; Severin S. Glass, in charge of Chicago office, 880 McClurg building; Desmond FitzGerald, representative west of Chicago, 12 E. 33rd St., New York City.

LAURENCE GOMME, proprietor of The Little Book Shop Around the Corner, has entered the field of publishing with Mr. John Jay Chapman's "Homeric Scenes." This is a free translation of fragments of the Iliad, brought together to make a dramatic whole. Mr. Gomme has also just published Cecil Chesterton's "The Prussian Hath Said In His Heart" with a prefatory note by George Bernard Shaw. Mr. Chesterton's special purpose in writing this book is not so much to demonstrate the crime of Prussia, as to explain it, and he is hopeful that it may be of some slight use in helping Americans to understand the European situation.

THIS WEEK the Macmillan Co. published "The Harbor," by Ernest Poole, a story of New York City life; "Children of Earth," Alice Brown's play which won the $10,000 prize offered by Winthrop Ames for the best American drama; "Plaster Saints," a startling new play by Israel Zangwill, author of "The Melting Pot," the central character being a clergyman in a provincial English town; and "Modern Religious Movements in India," by J. N. Farquhar. On February 10 will appear a translation by Dr. von Mach of "German World Politics," an important ante bellum study of the aims, fears and aspirations of the German people, by Paul Rohrbach, well known in Germany as a writer upon political and economic questions.

THE ONE IS BY Ford Madox Hueffer and the other by Anne Warwick; the one is entitled "A Tale of Passion," and the other "The Chalk Line"; but in each of these love stories, to be published this month by the John Lane Co., appears a variation of the problem of "a man, a woman and a tertium quid." In the former the tertium quid is "the girl" who breaks up a little coterie of four congenial married people. In "The Chalk Line," Hilary Comer leaves her husband for the love of Louis Pembroke (tertium quid number one), a man who had figured in her life before her marriage (tertium quid number two), follows her to her bungalow, also her husband follows her, and the four are shut up in the bungalow together, quarantined for cholera.

THE MERE FACT THAT "The Oxford Book of American Essays" is uniform with "The Oxford Book of English Verse" is enough to prejudice us in its favor. The volume is edited by Brander Matthews and contains thirty-two essays—not including the author's own Preface, which is by no means the least attractive contribution. Twenty-eight authors are represented; Franklin is drawn upon for three essays, Irving for two and Emerson for two. Among the other essays are Poe's "Philosophy of Composition"; Whitman's "Preface to Leaves of Grass"; Hawthorne's "Birds and Bird Voices"; Thoreau's "Walking"; Burroughs' "Idyl of the Honey Bee"; Lodge's "Colonialism in the U. S."; Higginson's "Americanism in Literature"; and Lowell's "On a Certain Condescension of Foreigners." Another recent publication of the Oxford University Press is "Representative English Dramas from Dryden to Sheridan" by F. and J. W. Tupper.

IN CONNECTION with its removal to Fourth Avenue the Century Co. has issued an attractive booklet recounting briefly the history of the company. The beginning of the story goes back to the days before there were horse-cars on Broadway, when Brentano's was down on Union Square, when the Century building towered above its neighbors to the right and left, when the old Everett House, where Anthony Hope, Henry M. Stanley, Conan Doyle and many other noted foreigners "stopped" was next door, and the Clarendon Hotel where Thackeray stayed was just around the corner. Much space is devoted to the history of the Century Magazine and the part such men as Dr. J. G. Holland, Charles Scribner and Roswell Smith played in its early affairs. The Century was the pioneer in printing the name of the writer of a story or an article with the contribution. It was also a trail-breaker in the field of magazine advertising. Among the contributors to St. Nicholas were Tennyson, Longfellow, Whittier, Louisa M. Alcott, Frank Stockton, Trowbridge, Edward Eggleston and Kipling—whose "Jungle Stories" were written for St. Nicholas. The booklet contains several views of Union Square "then" and "now," and of the Century Company's new quarters.

OF INTEREST to publishers, as well as to the printers and members of the allied trades for whom it is being built, is the announcement of the new twenty-two story building to be erected on Eighth Avenue between Thirty-third and Thirty-fourth streets in which it is planned to house representatives of every branch of the publishing and printing business. Here, if the plans of the building's promoters do not miscarry, a buyer will be able to find under one roof samples and nearly all grades and makes of paper, printing inks, machinery used in printing, lithographing and binding, and advertising matter of every description, as well as books, pamphlets and magazines. The design of the building will blend with that of the Pennsylvania Station and the new Post Office, its neighbors. The twenty-first floor will be devoted to a restaurant and luncheon club for the printing trades, the side walls of the restaurant being of glass and the floor set back from the main wall so as to leave a broad promenade on all four sides. The building will represent the "latest" in printing trade building refinements and even luxuries, and rentals will correspond.

When a child of six, Peter Loring sees in a garden a mass of red poppies and in their midst a golden-haired child—a sight that remains in his mind as a vision of beauty and joy. Years later he studies art, and experiences three phases which estrange him from his ideal: the first as the pet of society women whose portraits he paints; the second as a gay bohemian in Munich; and the third as a cold and uninspired landscape painter. Yielding at last to the impulse of his boyish vision, he paints a masterpiece, and wins the heart of the girl whose beauty has been his inspiration.

Author finds California as full of romance and beauty as any of the countries in Europe of which he has done motor-travel books. He is still firm in his belief that a motor is the most effective way to see a country. Though book will be of use to other motorists, its chief concern is with the charm and variety of the scenery, not with the mileage.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in JANUARY, 1915

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8°, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

A New Digest of New Facts

INFORMATION

A MONTHLY MAGAZINE

The Index to Dates of Current Events, published for three years by this office, is to be expanded, beginning with the issue of February, 1915, into a new monthly magazine, INFORMATION.

INFORMATION will retain all the features that have made the Index to Dates so valuable a reference tool to librarians, publicists, and research workers generally. Its entries will, however, be correlated and rewritten into informative and readable digests of the topics treated, making it, in effect, within its field, a continuous cyclopedia of current events and human progress, while still in the making.

Full record of dates will continue to be given in all entries, making INFORMATION as valuable an index to daily newspapers as was the Index to Dates, while the more complete original entry will, hereafter, not only oftentimes render further reference to newspaper sources unnecessary, but will also render INFORMATION almost equally useful to those small libraries and individual research workers to whom bound files of newspapers are not immediately accessible, and to whom, for this reason, the old Index to Dates was necessarily comparatively valueless.

Larger type, a new typographical style, and a cover will make INFORMATION more conveniently usable. The number of pages will be doubled.

The material of the monthly issues of INFORMATION will be cumulated quarterly into one alphabet.

The price of INFORMATION for the present at least, will remain the same as Index to Dates, $4 a year; without quarterly cumulations, $3 a year. A free specimen copy will be gladly sent on request.

"A Benevolent Friend just saved me

from missing 'The Rose Garden Husband.' It is something for thanksgiving, so I send thanks to you and the author. The story is now cut out and stitched, and in my collection of 'worth-while' stories, in a portfolio that holds only the choicest stories from many magazines. There is a healthy tone in this that puts it above most of these choice ones. And a smoothness of action, a reality of motive and speech, that comforts the soul of a veteran reviewer."

From a Letter to the Publishers.

Many readers, unsolicited, wrote warm words of praise to author and publisher

"The most delightful story I have encountered for many a day."

"I found 'The Rose-Garden Husband' a capital book to read aloud. It's chuck full of human nature and humor, the two chief requirements of such a book."

"'The Rose-Garden Husband' has been read by every member of my family, one picking it up as fast as another put it down. It is such a deliciously satisfactory book."

"I found 'The Rose-Garden Husband' a capital book to read aloud. It's chuck full of human nature and humor, the two chief requirements in such a book."

"'The Rose-Garden Husband' pleased me more than any modern story that has come to my attention."

"I want to tell you how much I enjoyed your story. It is so spontaneous and fresh and enthusiastic, and as to the Library touches, they are perfect and evidently 'from the inside!'"

"I lay no claim to being a literary critic, but I owe this to you; 'The Rose-Garden Husband' pleased me more than any modern story that has come to my attention. My aged mother however is an authority. She has just finished your story and declares it 'The best ever.'"

"'The Rose-Garden Husband' is not only free from every thing objectionable, but it is fascinatingly beautiful. It leaves a good taste, and one feels cleaner and sweeter for having read it. I hope you will write many more stories as good as that."
